

As a customer of some of these banks listed, I would like to protest the attempt by the Consumer Bankers Association to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law. While they may provide a service to me, it should be up to me whether I want to be confronted with sales pitches while at home. I am already subject to all of their advertising while in their establishments and do not want my privacy invaded in my own home. If successful, the barrage of calls from my credit card companies, telephone companies, etc. will begin again. Please continue to uphold the current law in place and protect Indiana consumers from "unwanted" solicitations.
